

Andy Harvey, Professor and Director of Industrial Doctorate Centre in Optics and Photonics Technologies

ARH conducts research in computational imaging fundamentals, techniques and applications including: wavefront coding for alleviation of optical aberrations, aperture synthesis and spectral and hyperspectral imaging and its application in ophthalmology.

He is also Director of the Industrial Doctorate Centre, a collaboration representing all photonics researchers in Heriot-Watt, Glasgow, Strathclyde and St Andrews Universities. About forty Engineering Doctorate students are registered with the IDC and conduct research whilst based in industry across the full range of optics and photonics technologies and related technologies in microsystems, manufacture and signal/image processing.
